

Writer's Community Captivates Its Readers by Blogging

The 2006 Writer's Blog Anthology is a compilation of essays, poems, and short stories, written by the members of Writer's Blog Alliance as well as other writers in the blogosphere. This is a multi-genre collection, composed entirely of posts and reader responses.

San Jose, CA (PRWeb) October 23, 2006 -- Writer's Blog Alliance has produced its first anthology, using the blog medium. Think of a blog as an online newsletter or website, where writers can communicate with their readers and vice versa.

The 2006 Writer's Blog Anthology is a compilation of essays, poems, and short stories, written by the members of Writer's Blog Alliance as well as other writers in the blogosphere. This is a multi-genre collection, composed entirely of posts and reader responses.

Deborah Woehr edited and compiled the 2006 Writer's Blog Anthology to help herself and other independently published authors gain exposure and more readers for their blogs and books. The 2006 Writer's Blog Anthology is available for purchase at Lulu.com.

"Blogging has become a powerful tool for writers to reach their prospective readers on a global level," said Deborah Woehr.

Link to Publication: <http://www.lulu.com/content/415394>

About the authors

The writers in this collection are diverse in their careers as well as their writing styles. What they have in common is how they draw and entertain their readers.

About the editor

Deborah Woehr is the founder of The Writers Buzz, which helps promote the books of new and established writers, and the former co-founder of the Writer's Blog Alliance, a community for writers who blog.

###

Contact Information

Deborah Woehr

<http://www.lulu.com/content/415394>

408-529-1545

Online Web 2.0 Version

You can read the online version of this press release here.